OUR HISTORY

The founding of NJ MORE Field Guide College was inspired by passionate conservationist Nick John More (1967-2013). It fulfils his wish to continue the legacy of three generations of More nature ambassadors, dedicated to protecting our environment, and to share their love and knowledge of the world's last wild places. Therefore, students are chosen for their genuine and palpable love of the bush, and their ability to inspire this in others from around the world.

OUR GUIDING CULTURE

Our NJ MORE field guides are the new generation of nature ambassadors. They have a vast knowledge of the environment, a passion for guiding, a dedication to teaching people about our extraordinary natural heritage, and inspiring them to do their part to protect it. In conducting safaris, our guides never cause undue stress to the wildlife, and are careful to maintain a balance between human presence and ecosystem health. Students have a clear demonstration of these commitments being based at Marataba South Africa, within the 'Marakele' National Park – 'place of sanctuary' in the Tswana language.

OUR LOCATION

Marataba South Africa is a 23 000ha section of the greater Marakele National Park – a magnificent piece of Waterberg* wilderness, just 3.5 hours outside Johannesburg. The scenery is dramatic, the wildlife prolific and readily seen, and the plant life equally intriguing. All of the Big Five, along with smaller and rarer species, like the highly-endangered pangolin, are to be found here. Among the flora, rare yellowwood and cedar trees, and ancient cycads and ferns flourish. The park has a significant history too, conserving ancient San Rock art and Iron Age sites.

The NJ MORE camp is students' home in the bush, providing a welcoming living and studying environment. Accommodation in two-sleeper tent suites on stilts is comfortable – each with electricity, twin beds, personal cupboards, an en-suite bathroom, and a shaded study deck.

The main camp area offers a leisure room, with games equipment, as well as a PC and fully-stocked library. There is a pool, too for cooling off and relaxing around in the summer months and an open-air boma, with a firepit, to gather in and swap stories during the evenings.

Students are provided with three wholesome meals a day, and have access to Wi-Fi and cell phone reception in the camp. Our college ensures all students feel at home away from home.
